Dakahlia Governorate Mansoura city

Dakahlia Governorate is located in the East Delta region. Its population is 4.3 millions; representing 7.2% of Egypt's total population. It is ranked in population as the third among the 26 Governorates of Egypt. The surrounding governorates are: to the east, El-Sharkia, to the west, El-Garbia and kafr El-Sheik, to the south, El-Kalubia while Damietta is to the north east.

The city of Mansoura is the capital of the Governorate, located on the east bank of Damietta branch of the Nile with the city Talkha lying on the western bank. It covers about 24.8 square kilometers. Its population amounts to 800,000. The city is 60 km from the Mediterranean Sea, where Gamasa is located. It is 120 km from Cairo and is connected with a net of transportations. The train and busses are the most important ones.

Mansoura (victorious) was named after the victory achieved over King Louis IX, the King of France in 1250, when he tried to invade the city during the seventh crusade campaign. He was captured in the house of the judge Ibn-Lukman which is now a museum, and the seventh of May, became the national day of the Governorate.
